HOW TO READ THIS REPORT

True cap rate. What a building actually earns on its price. The rents listed in each sale, times 12, less 35% for taxes, insurance, repairs, management and vacancy, divided by what it sold for. Listing agents tend to advertise higher cap rates by using low expenses.

Gross rent multiplier. Sold price divided by a full year of rent. Lower means more rent for the money.

Price tiers. Two years of sales split into four equal groups by price per unit, so a buyer can see where a building sits against everything else that sold.

Months of supply. How long the current active listings would take to sell at the past year's pace. Under 4 months favors sellers, over 6 favors buyers.
